

BEVERLY GROVE

CURBED INSIDE

6

Touring Bev Hills's New The Wallis Performing Arts Center

BY ADRIAN GLICK KUDLER | OCT 18, 2013, 8:02PM PDT

TWEET

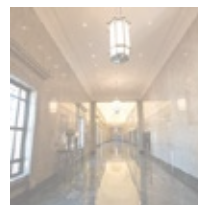

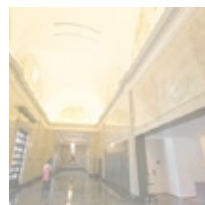

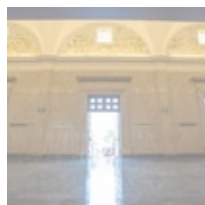

SHARE

PIN

REC

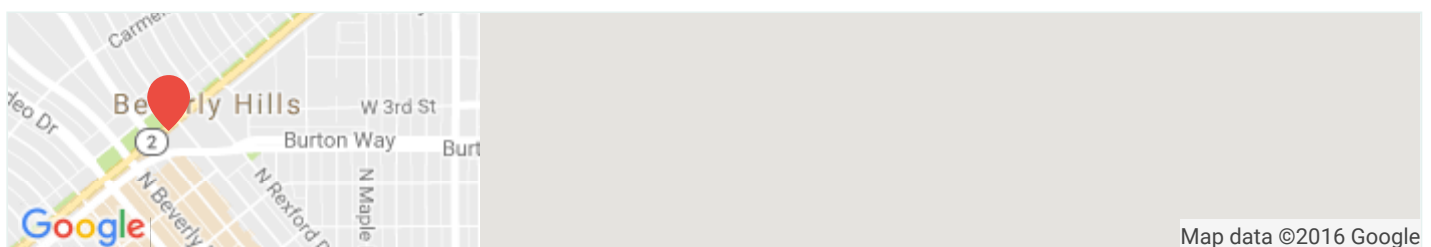

| 1 OF 28

Photos by [Elizabeth Daniels]

Finally Westsiders have a flashy performing arts venue where they can pay a bunch of money to see string quartets and ballet ensembles, right? Still, the Wallis Annenberg Center for the Performing Arts (nicknamed The Wallis) is a pretty good one--architect Zoltan Pali designed the center, which incorporates both a 1933 post office on Santa Monica Boulevard and a new building just behind. Inside, there's a gift shop (currently hosting a Ferragamo pop-up), the 500-seat Bram Goldsmith Theater, classrooms, a cafe, a sculpture garden, event terrace, and underneath: some parking. Take a tour around up above.

• Bev Hills's New/Historic Annenberg Arts Center Opens in Fall [Curbed LA]

Map data ©2016 Google

Wallis Annenberg Center for the Performing Arts